Greetings!

If you worshipped with us (either in-person or virtually) last Sunday, then you witnessed one of the things I love most about St. Luke's. We collaborated for a Q&A sermon and once again the faithfulness, thoughtfulness, and even playfulness of our parish were on display in all the index cards you filled out.

Also, once again, there were so many questions that I could only get through a portion of the cards. So let me tackle a few extra here. I'll keep my responses brief (never an easy thing for me).

One final note by way of introduction. I have organized your questions into three categories: "What is God all about," "Living a faith-filled life," and "Life at St. Luke's."

What is God all about?

Is Jesus more about judgment or mercy?

Well, practically, I suppose you can't have one without the other. But more importantly, my reading of the crucifixion and resurrection suggests that for Jesus (and God) mercy and grace reign supreme. Recall that even as Jesus hung on the cross alongside two thieves being crucified, he told one of them, "Truly I tell you, today you will be with me in Paradise." (Luke 24:43) Further and more fundamentally to me, His resurrection serves as an invitation for all of us (including those first disciples who abandoned him on the cross) to know the mercy and grace of our God. Judgement is not the final act in our Gospel—mercy and grace get the last word.

Is heaven a place just for Christians?

I do not believe that to be true. I do believe it is true that there was and is something uniquely divine about Jesus and particularly salvific about the resurrection. But I can not believe that those who have never been exposed to Jesus or his story—or even those who have adopted a different faith story-- would be summarily excluded from that experience we call "heaven." Rather, I believe God's love to be more expansive and God's ways to be more creative than confined to a simple or singular Christian formula.

Do you think God sent Jesus to other planets and places besides Earth? If "God so loved the world..." (John 3:16), why just this world?

What an interesting question to consider! If God is in some way the Creator of all things, then why would this creator not extend love and concern to those other worlds—whatever they might entail? Again, I refer back to my closing sentence in the previous paragraph: “I believe God’s love to be more expansive and God’s ways to be more creative than confined to a simple or singular Christian formula.” And to that statement I would add, “... to be confined to a simple or singular Christian formula or even a solitary human world.”

Living a faith-filled life.

What do you think about what Christians would think about what’s going on in Afghanistan?

Well I am sure that there is no one answer to this question, as Christians think a variety of things about any one topic. That said, I am mindful of the last verse from the Epistle of James, which we heard just this past Sunday. Religion that is pure and undefiled before God, the Father, is this: to care for orphans and widows in their distress, and to keep oneself unstained by the world.” (James 1:27) The shortest single verse on our gospels also comes to mind: “Jesus wept.” (John 11:35) It seems like those two verses might be a helpful place to begin our Christian response.

The Prodigal Son parable—so much was made over the son who returned... how do those who never left feel about this? How do we accept those who were/are lost? And not feel unrecognized for our steadfastness?

These questions get at our very human wrestling with this parable. While I won’t pretend to speak for all those who might identify with the faithful older son, here’s my own thinking. Honestly, I imagine many who “never left” feel resentful—resentful that the younger brother returns to such fanfare and celebration. There is no hint of joy on the part of the elder brother in this story. So how does one accept those who were/are lost without feeling unrecognized? To this part of the question I wonder, first, what would feeling recognized entail? Let’s not overlook the fact that the father tells the elder son, “Son, you are always with me and all that is mine is yours.” (Luke 16:31) That sounds like a pretty clear expression of recognition and affection to my ears. If that statement is not recognition enough, then I wonder is the desire more about recognition for the elder son or punishment for the returning son? Of course, both desires are totally understandable and human. But the parable, among many things, reveals God’s capacity for mercy in addition to our desire for judgment (see the first question above).

Does prayer have the power to heal all ailments? Does prayer truly work?

Yes, I believe so. But let’s be clear that our definitions and expectations of “Heal(ing) all ailments...” and “work(ing)” might be very different from how God “answers” our prayers. About prayer I would say these things: 1. The way prayer works can not be distilled into a formula or a quid pro quo transaction—it is, like with all things divine, a bit of a mystery. 2. I believe God attends to and responds to our prayers. 3. As Soren Kierkegaard once wrote, “At the very least, prayer changes the pray-er.”

Our teenaged children resist coming to church and worship on Sunday. They say it doesn’t mean anything to them. What can we say and do to show them that this is good for them?

Ahhh, the only questions harder than explaining the mystery of the divine is explaining the mystery of adolescents! A question that combines both—well it is humbling indeed. But here's my thinking. First of all, at some point, teenagers often resist and dismiss anything parents value—that's developmentally appropriate; do not be dismayed. Second, do not be deterred from asking (or even requiring) that they continue to come. While each parent needs to sort out her/his parenting voice throughout the adolescent years, you still do have voice and license to require your children to do what you value as important for them. (Just because they complain about brushing their teeth you don't allow them to stop, do you?) Third, keep in mind the latent learning theory which suggests that evidence of learning might not surface until years after the lesson. Even though your daughter or son might say (and perhaps truly feel) that it "doesn't mean anything to them," that doesn't mean the experience won't have meaning in later years. And finally, in response to, "What can we say and do to show them that this is good for them?" I would say, show them first that it is good for you.

Life at St. Luke's

Will Tuesday's healing service be resumed in the fall?

I am eager to resume offering this service but have heard from many participants that the time is not quite right yet. If you are interested in the resumption of this service, PLEASE let me know and we will offer it.

Do you plan to keep our Adult Faith Formation meetings on Zoom or transition back to in-person meetings?

One of the unexpected "gifts" of this terrible pandemic is that it has led to a significant increase in those attending Adult Faith Formation classes. Both the change in timing (from Sunday at 9:00AM to Wednesday at 7:00PM) and the adoption of the Zoom platform have allowed more people to participate. So, at this time, we expect to continue holding the main AFF offering on Wednesday nights and by way of Zoom. But also, we will be developing additional offerings that might focus on a one-off kind of subject and involve in-person gatherings.

How can one get more involved at St. Luke's?

I LOVE THIS QUESTION! The opportunities are numerous and in the first several Sundays of September we will be featuring a variety of our ministries at the coffee hours. Please visit the tables in the atrium. Also, keep your ears tuned to our many announcements and invitations. When you hear me say, "We are looking for folks to help out with..." hear that as an invitation to YOU! And then, please, don't be bashful about approaching Tanya, Rodney, Gary and Bill, our wardens, or any of our leaders to express your interest. Besides the fact that St. Luke's is what it is because of you, if you get more involved in St. Luke's you will find your own life infinitely enriched. Being more involved at St. Luke's doesn't just change St. Luke's—it changes you as well.

When will we bless the new kitchen/dining room?

Like the answer to so many of our questions about all manner of things, God only knows! ☺ More seriously, the work continues at a steady pace. The biggest current uncertainty is the arrival of various items on back-order. Stay tuned for updates from Gary. And know that when the time arrives, we will enjoy one grand celebration!!

In conclusion...

So now do you see why I began this letter by saying, “ If you worshipped with us (either in-person or virtually) last Sunday, then you witnessed one of the things I love most about St. Luke’s.” I am so grateful for your questions. And I am equally thankful that we get to search for answers together.

I can’t wait to see and hear what the upcoming “program year” has in store for us all!

Peace,
Tim

Please join us

as we explore our faith in Christ more deeply.

Please read the Foreword, "Before We Begin", and Part 1, Chapter 1: "Christ is not Jesus' Last Name" in anticipation of our first class.

Coffee Hour

Coffee Hour Volunteers

People don't come to coffee hour just for a cup of joe; they want a human connection, something we all have missed during the pandemic! Here's a place where we build community one cup at a time.

We need your help! Father Tim would like to resume Coffee Hour. For now, we are only offering coffee and juice- no food.

As usual, our sexton, Tim, will set up the coffee urn in the morning. The Coffee Hour host simply needs to set up the coffee "station" with cups, sugars, creamer and napkins. These supplies (except the creamer) are all kept in the armoire in the Blackburn Room. There will be a table set up in the narthex near the stairs where you can set up a juice "station" with small juice cups and napkins. Tablecloths can be found in the armoire also.

So, the host would bring half and half as well as some type of juice. Everything else is provided. After the 10:15am service's coffee hour, the urns would need to be cleaned out and stored in the Blackburn Room and you would need to ensure that coffee grounds go in the trash.

Please consider signing up for an upcoming Sunday so we can properly extend our hospitality and reconnect. Christina put the sign-up sheet on the wall across from the office. You can sign up at church or call Christina in the office at 401-884-4116 and she'll add you to the list.

We look forward to seeing you all soon,

Tracy

Loaves and Fishes

Loaves and Fishes

We'd like to thank everyone who donated supplies and food to this month's Loaves and Fishes run to the Family Shelter in Woonsocket. The meals, backpacks with school supplies, underwear, and other supplies were very much appreciated by the shelter. It felt great to help the people there who are in such desperate need. Keep your eye out for plans for our next run on September 25th. The shelter staff identified a need in the future for bath towels, facecloths, and used DVD players. We couldn't continue this mission without your support."

Pastoral Care

St. Luke's Choirs Sing for You!

As a special gift from the Canterbury, St. Cecilia, and Angel Choirs to our St. Luke's family and friends, choir members compiled a special 'arrangement' of "How Can I Keep From Singing". The music is from an American folk song originally composed by Baptist minister Robert Wadworth Lowry in 1868 with the four-part arrangement published by Jeffrey Honoré in 1991. The choirs performed this piece at their 2019 Spring Concert and happily recreated that performance in this video (also available on St. Luke's website and Facebook page).
